Understand the foundations of iris analysis

Iridology is a fascinating observational tool that can be applied in your clinical practice. With iris analysis, you can see your clients' individual presentations including mechanisms of symptoms and also predispositions from genetic influences.

Many practitioners find that Iridology can help to build rapport with clients as you identify their unique approaches through constitutional analysis.

Iridology can help to strengthen your understanding of how mechanisms of action influence different individual signs and symptoms. A powerful addition to your existing practice.
